A Life That Told.

Thirty-five years ago the region about the London docks contained as large a heathen population as any district in Africa. Back of the huge warehouses were innumerable courts and alleys filled with fog and dirt, and every horror of sight and sound and smell. It was a rendezvous for the lowest types of humanity.

The wealthy and influential classes in this settlement were the rum-sellers and keepers of gambling halls. Children were born and grew to middle age in these precincts who had never heard the name of Christ, except in an oath. Thirty thousand souls were included in one parish here, but the clergymen never ventured out of the church to teach.

A young man named Charles Lowder, belonging to an old English family, happened to pass through this district just after leaving Oxford. His classmates were going into politics, or the army, or to the bar, full of ambition and hope to make a name in the world; but Lowder heard, as he said, "a cry of mingled agony, suffering, laughter and blasphemy coming from these depths, that rang in his ears, go where he would."

He resolved to give up all other work in the world, to help these people.

He took a house in one of the lowest slums, and lived in it. "It is only one of themselves that they will hear; not patrolling visitors."

He preached every day in the streets, and for months was pelted with bricks, shot at, and driven back with curses. He had unfortunately no eloquence with which to reach them; he was a slow, stammering speaker, but he was bold, patient, and in earnest. Year after year he lived among them. Even the worst ruffian learned to respect the tall, thin curate, whom he saw stopping the worst street fights, feeling mobs, or nursing the victims of Asiatic cholera.

Mr. Lowder lived in London Docks for twenty-three years. Night-schools were opened, industrial schools, and refuges for drunkards, discharged prisoners and fallen women. A large church was built and several mission chapels. His chief assistants in this work were the men and women whom he had rescued from "the paths that lead to hell." A visitor to the church said "the congregation differed from others in that they are all in such deadly earnest."

Mr. Lowder broke down under his work, and rapidly grew into an old, careworn man. He died in a village in the Tyrol, whither he had gone for a month's rest. He was brought back to the Docks, where he had worked so long.

Across the bridge where he had once been chased by a furious mob, bent on his murder, his body was reverently carried, while the police were obliged to keep back the crowds of sobbing people who pressed forward to catch the last glimpse of "Father Lowder," as they called him. "No such funeral," says a London paper, "has ever been seen in England. The whole population of East London turned out, stopping work for that day. The special trains run to Chiselmhurst were filled, and thousands followed on foot—miserable men and women whom he had lifted up from barbarism to life and hope."

There are many careers open to young men on entering the world, but there are none nobler or that lead more directly to heaven than that of this modern crusader.—[Youth's Companion.]

The Tobacco Crop.

The census statistics of the production of tobacco, completed in Washington, show some very interesting figures in regard to this subject. The increase in growth of tobacco since 1889 has been almost incredible, and large fortunes have been made.

The total increase in the number of pounds produced in the United States in the last decade is 20,000,000 pounds. This represents nearly half that the increase in Kentucky alone, which produces almost half of the tobacco grown in the United States. The increase in Kentucky is about 44,000,000 pounds.

The remarkable thing about this increase is that the acreage has only increased from 226,120 to 273,915, while the number of pounds has increased from 171,130,784 to 225,405,047, an increase in the pounds to the acre from about 750 to 820. This is an extremely startling showing when compared to the production to the acre in any other State. A great many tobacco-growing States show an increase. Virginia, with 112,000 acres, only produced 19,000,000 pounds, or less than 150 pounds to the acre. The following are the figures for Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky:

	1880.	Pounds.
Kentucky	226,120	171,130,784
Ohio	34,676	34,735,235
Indiana	11,955	8,772,842
	1890.	Pounds.
Kentucky	273,915	225,405,047
Ohio	44,348	87,620,581
Indiana	9,350	7,679,110

Tollers in the Streams

If any order literature is born to a life of ease, and is exempt from the performance of a daily task, it might be thought that the fishes in the water form that order. They need no shelter from the rain or protection from the wind. They live under a transparent roof that makes their home more splendid than a crystal palace. Their board is always spread at just that level that they may recluse at their meals with all the luxuries of Greek and Roman gentility. The same restful couch upon which they take their meals serves equally well for repose. No beings occupy a home in which more comforts have been secured and yet, even these are intent upon making improvements.

A Scotch naturalist writes pleasantly of some building operations which he saw going on at the bottom of a ditch. One summer day, he was amused by watching the singular proceedings of two lamprys in a small ditch of clear running water near his house.

They were about six inches in length, and as large round as a pencil. The two little creatures were most busily and anxiously employed in making little triangular heaps of stones, using for the purpose irregularly shaped bits of gravel about the size of a large pea.

When they wished to move a large stone, they helped each other in endeavoring to roll it into the desired position. Occasionally they both left their labors, and appeared to rest for a short time, and then they returned to the work with fresh vigor.

The object of their building this observer did not venture to guess, but he had a good opportunity of watching them, as the water was quite clear and shallow, and they were so intent upon what they were at, that they took no notice whatever of him.

He had intended to examine the little heaps of stones which they had made, but going from home the next day put it out of his recollection, and he lost the opportunity. It seems, however, so singular a maneuver on the part of fish to build up regular little pyramids of gravel, bringing some of the stones from the distance of two feet against the current, and rolling them to the place with evident difficulty, that the lamprys must have some good reason which leads them to take the trouble.—[Youth's Companion.]

The following item, clipped from the Ft. Madison, Iowa Democrat, contains information well worth remembering: "Mr. John Toth, of this city, who met with an accident a few days ago spraining and bruising his leg and arm quite severely, was cured by one 50-cent bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm." This remedy is without an equal for sprains and bruises and should have a place in every household. For sale by T. G. Julian.

Everything has its uses. Just as the patient equine is laid off from the street cars, and electricity substituting, the horse plays become fashionable in the theatres.

In almost every neighborhood throughout the west there is some one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or who have been cured of chronic diarrhoea by it. Such persons take especial pleasure in recommending the remedy to others. The praise that follows its introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by T. G. Julian.

Closing Exercises.

Mar. Editor:

The community of Grassy Lick was highly entertained last Friday by the closing exercises of Miss Mary Anderson's school. The pastors and friends showed their appreciation of the labors of Miss Mary

by coming early to the examination and were gratified to note the improvement the pupils had made during the past six months.

At noon they spread as delightful and beautiful a dinner as it is seldom our fortune to enjoy. At 2 o'clock the

we were called together and entertained by readings and dialogues which were well rendered. Among those creditably mentioned were The Barons of Moses, by Miss Marion Hadden; The Song of the Shirt; by Miss Giosia

Boyd; The Charcoal Man, by Master

Peer Shirley; Master Johnny's Next

Door Neighbor, by Master Roy Morris

Corner; and Thanksgiving

Street, by Master Oliver Howell; Miss

Edith Helps Things Along, by Miss

Nellie Boyd; The Snack in School, by

Master James Gifford; Aunt Sylvia's

Geography Lesson, by Miss Lillie

Peggs; and Lochmivar, by Master Archie Mason. The smaller pupils did equally as well as those mentioned, but space forbids a more minute description.

By request Miss Anderson favored us with a reading. The school has been a success, and Miss Mary has earned the thanks of her patrons for the faithful work done.

The wild storm of Tuesday last was destructive to shade trees, etc., in and around this city. At the time the storm came up, the friends had gathered at the Methodist church to attend the funeral services of Mr. B. F. Saunders whose accidental death, by falling under the cars at Ashland, we noticed last week. The cost of the funeral was a crash, almost causing a riot in the church, order was restored before much confusion ensued.

We have heard lately of some ladies of Paris being stopped on the streets and hugged by a negro whose identity had not been ascertained. We hear one David Johnson was arrested Saturday, charged with the offense, and that the authorities had to remove him to Lexington to keep an outraged public from visiting on him the just punishment he deserved. Bourbon raises the flag of property and it seems a shame that some of her indignant citizens were not allowed to test its strength in this case.

The Public School of this city closes another successful session this week, the Commencement exercises taking place in the Opera House on Monday evening, June 15th, at 8 p. m. C. W. HARRIS.

The entertainment for the benefit of the Public Library will take place on the evening of the 18th. The library is not a charity but one of our best institutions. The city gives the room so that it shall be free to the community to use as a reading room. The expenses of keeping it up is defrayed by the subscribers who pay a yearly contribution of three dollars. If there were a large number of these, there would be money enough to keep up the stock of magazines and, from time to time, to add new books. The Library Association is out of debt, but there is no money in the treasury, and it is very important to have new books and more periodicals. It has been the custom since the library was first organized to give an entertainment of some kind once a year. These entertainments have been of great value to the community, and it is our hope that some of our public spirited women who have never failed to make them a success. The program of the evening will be as follows: Fancy Dress Party. There will be the Mother Goose Lancers and the Minstrels. Also at about 8 o'clock, the building lot of 55 feet front each, on the same street and adjoining the above named property.

For Sale.

I will sell at public sale, on Saturday, June 13, my residence on Howard Avenue. The lot has a frontage of 75 feet; on it is a dwelling of 9 rooms, besides halls, veranda, double porches, etc., 2 good closets, fruit and outbuildings. In short, a very complete home. Also at the same time, building lot of 55 feet front each, on the same street and adjoining the above named property.

Harris Institute Commencement.

On Wednesday evening the large audience room of the Christian church was filled to its utmost capacity by the great number of friends of the graduating class of 1891, of Harris Institute, who had come together to wish the young ladies a happy ending to their school life. The program was marked out was followed out by the opening exercises Miss Pearl Lane read a well digested essay on "The Long Ago." Then came such a wealth of beautiful flowers and tasteful presents from appreciating friends, as to make the occasion one that had been made, and that she had been sent the flowers and the pretty things belonging to the others as well as to herself, but in time we knew all were equally remembered.

Miss Hocker Hagerling followed with an essay that, though not quite so "flashy" as the others, was certainly one unique and whole. We must congratulate the lady on the beautiful thought, bits of deep philosophy, and words of truly worldly wisdom it contained. Miss Mattie Bridgeton came next with "Dewdrops," and she certainly acquitted herself to the delight of her fond friends. Her subject was handled with that ease and grace which showed she was fully mistress of it. We want to congratulate the young ladies on the perfect ease and freedom with which they displayed, and the distinctness of utterance and clearness of enunciation that marked every word spoken by them. If one in the vast audience failed to hear it was not the fault of the speaker.

Hon. J. Davis held, after a short but very appropriate address, the diploma to the young ladies.

Mr. R. R. Rogers delivered the annual address to the class. We cannot say too much for the manner in which this was received by the many friends of the speaker. They had expected much from him, and he did not disappoint them. His subject, "The Southern Woman," was happily chosen and ably handled. So well was it received, and so many have been the calls for it, that we have secured from him a new and interesting publication. Next week we will give the address in full, for the benefit of those of his friends and well wishers who have asked for it.

After the Commencement exercises an Alumni reception was held at the home of the principal, where many friends gathered to enjoy with the one time pupils, a reunion.

Exchange Bank Stock For Sale.

E. S. CUNNINGHAM.

43-2t J. O. W. WINN.

We are in receipt of the following invitation.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. R. Moore invite you to be present at the marriage of their sister, Mattie Withers Moore, to William Patton Griffiths, M. D., Wednesday evening, June 17, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety One, at eight o'clock.

Trinity P. E. Church, Covington, Ky.

Miss Mattie is one of the noblest women we have ever known. Chaste, true, and naturally an earnest lover of the public good, she has become sensitively alive with the keenest sympathy. In the heaviest sorrow that ever came to our life, her loving ministrations, yet appear to us as a bright light in the black cloud of distress that settled upon us.

No nobler, truer, tender heart ever beat within a woman's breast, and the gentleman who has won her will secure as true a helpmeet as ever blessed a man's life. As Mattie is expected from a woman of her good sense and keen insight into human nature, the man who has chosen her in every way worthy of her. Miss Mattie's host of friends in this section, with her world of happiness, in her new residence.

Major Fowler's new circular contains the names of J. W. Sewell as Assistant Principal of the Mt. Sterling Training School, and he has shown us the original of the following letter, which explains itself:

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN., May 11, 91.

MAJOR C. W. FOWLER,

My Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 4th inst. was duly received, but it remained unanswered because I could not think of the right man. But I have him now—J. W. Sewell, of the school room—Mr. J. W. Sewell. He is a son of Elder Sewell, of the Christian church. He was one of the best pupils in English I ever had, is good in Greek, etc. * * * Besides he has had two years' experience in teaching, and is a success in the school room. * * * I do not know of a better man anywhere, for as I said, I can endorse him without reservation. I taught him three years, and have kept up with him ever since.

Yours truly,

W. M. BAKERVELL.

Mr. Bakervell is Professor of English in Vanderbilt University.

On Saturday night a negro boy called at the house of Mr. R. L. Thompson's place, near Sharpburg, saying to Mr. R. L. Thompson's wife her husband was up the road drunk. The boy was asked to go home, saying she was afraid. The boy went away, but returned shortly afterward saying some men were around her husband and she had better go. Again she expressed her fear, when the boy volunteered to be her escort. They had proceeded but a short distance when three burly negroes appeared, and threw stones at the boy who ran off. These miscreants then seized the woman and carried her off some distance, detaching her all night and indignantly outraging her. The boy was arrested but was jailed at Owensville, but refuses to tell who the men were that perpetrated the horrible crime. If the miscreants are caught there will be a case for Judge Lynch.

On Tuesday evening the closing exercises of Prof. Fowler's Training School for Boys, was held at the Southern Presbyterian Church. The exercises were of the high order of merit that might be expected from so progressive a teacher as Major Fowler. The exercises opened with an essay from each of three young gentlemen who had been selected by their fellow pupils to represent them. Andrew Gibson opened the exercises with a well prepared essay the subject of which was "Amusements," followed by Farris Templeman with "Butterflies and Honey Bees," Willie Strossman came next with a paper that would have done credit to one whose years were many more than he had number of the subject of which was "Dried Cities." Judge French in an entertaining talk which he would not dignify by the name of a speech, followed presenting the gold medal for the best display of the handsome pair of Ovingville, but refuses to tell who the men were that perpetrated the horrible crime. If the miscreants are caught there will be a case for Judge Lynch.

The exercises opened with an essay from each of three young gentlemen who had been selected by their fellow pupils to represent them. Andrew Gibson opened the exercises with a well prepared essay the subject of which was "Amusements," followed by Farris Templeman with "Butterflies and Honey Bees," Willie Strossman came next with a paper that would have done credit to one whose years were many more than he had number of the subject of which was "Dried Cities." THE ADVOCATE.

ANOTHER PROVERB EXPLODED.

It Death Leaves a Shining Mark in General Takes Very Poor Aim. They had been discussing the death of a prominent member of the bar, and the lawyer remarked with a sigh: "Well, 'Death leaves a shining mark.'"

"Nonsense," retorted the doctor. "There is about as much truth in that saying as in 'Death is no respecter of persons.'"

"Study your history and you'll find that if Death leaves a shining mark he is one of the worst marksmen in the world. Look up statistics and you'll find that he gives the rich every favor."

"There's Gladstone, Bismarck and Blaine. What a trio to shoot at if he had any confidence in his marksmanship! All three have been shining marks for years, and he has never even winged them. And what's the matter with Von Moltke, Pope Leo and Queen Victoria? They're all old, but Death has hardly touched them. And Hannibal Hamlin! As hale and hearty as a man of his years can be. If you stop and think a moment you can add a score of names to the list of shining marks."

"Then go into history. How about William I of Germany? And George Washington! And Dr. Johnson! And Ben Franklin! And there's your death got them in the end, as he gets at, but he leaves a shining mark he must have wasted careful aim and ammunition. He must have missed. Banquet a number of times."

"The saying is an absurd one every way you look at it. The shining marks have generally lived long, because the average mortal has to live long to become a shining mark. Fully nine-tenths of the shining marks have lived to a good old age, and death never hit the majority of them until they were ready to drop from feebleness."

"Of course he occasionally hits a shining mark, but you will generally find that he had his man wounded before he became such a shining mark. The late Emperor Frederick of Germany was hit before he became emperor."

"And the other, 'Death is no respecter of persons.' Just look it up. Menes was ten times as fat as the poor as among the rich. The sphinx fever twice as fatal, scarlet fever three times, pneumonia twice, and so on to the end of the list. Convulsions hit nearly thirteen times as fatal to the babies of the poor."

"By the way, how old was your friend?"

"About seventy-six, I think."—Chicago Tribune.

See Remembrance on Watch Face.

Did you ever try to call off the name on the face of your watch with out looking at it? If not, you will be surprised to learn how difficult it is to do it correctly.

The other night a gentleman, under the inspiration of a modest wager made by a friend, attempted the feat. This was the result of his efforts:

"First," he said, "there is one IV; two II, two III, three IV, four V, five VI, six VII, seven VIII, eight IX, nine X, ten XI, eleven XII, twelve XIII. There, what's the matter with that?"

"Nothing," was the rejoinder, "except that you are not only wrong but very far from being right. Look at your watch and satisfy yourself."

Oh came the lament of the gentleman: "Well, I declare," he exclaimed, "that is a revelation to me. Why, I thought there were only Roman numerals to indicate the hour, and the fact that there were second hands on the face never entered my head, that little dial of course wiping out the VI, which I thought was there. Yes, I lost the money squarely."—New York Herald.

Women's Hands.

A pretty woman rarely has a pretty hand. I got that interesting fact from one of the maids and the fact that women's hands are always white, neat, though not always shapely. Nearly all English women have or would have hands. Nails that have no half moons are a sign of bad circulation. True-fits find regular employment for four maids. They are among the cleverest operators in London. The young woman who waited on me the other day said she could do a pair of maids' hands in half an hour. One operation usually takes half an hour. Gentlemen keep their hands and nails in better condition than ladies, as said. But they don't admire the pointed style, and they don't like their nails highly polished.

Each operator has a rack to herself, furnished with a cushioned easy chair, a couple of tiny tables and a stool. A tall screen on one side and a silk curtain on the other prevents other customers looking in. To keep the nails in nice condition it is necessary to take a measure once a fortnight. People with lots of money are manoeuvred every week.—Miss Mantall's London Letter.

Fluid Insulator.

A type of insulator hitherto little known is coming into use. It is a porous body of the insulator is filled with an insulating fluid which neither freezes nor evaporates, and will not support the slightest fire or dust. Other recommendations claimed for it are that it does not creep like paraffine or other mineral oils, and lasts three or four years, even in the hottest and driest climate. A clean and highly insulating fluid surface is thus interposed between the line and the insulator. Insulators are found to be especially efficient in rainy weather. The insulating fluid is prepared in London under a secret process.—New York Telegram.

The Itata has surrendered to Acting Admiral McCall, at Aquapico, and turned over 5,000 rifles that she had on board.

The Insurgent Government claims that these arms were not embarked at San Diego, but many miles from that port upon the high seas.

The Itata communicated with the Insurgent cruiser General de Aquapico, but transferred nothing to her. The Insurgent authorities, so soon as the manner of the Itata's departure from San Diego was learned, communicated their intention to this government to surrender her and her outfit about one week ago.

The Itata will be sent back to San Diego under escort to answer the charge of violating the neutrality laws.—[Courier-Journal.

Next-Building Fishes.

The Blisk is a Russian fish which lives in the Black Sea. When the hatching season approaches, it seeks the shore and builds there a nest for its young.

Both father and mother unite in gathering seaweeds and deposit them in small holes on the shore. There the mother lays her eggs, and watches over them like a careful hen until they are hatched.

The stickleback, or prickly build, is next for its young, but defends it with great zeal and ferocity. One naturalist says that he took a male stickleback from the water, and placed him with others in a collecting bottle. Then he went on observing the nest which the prisoner had been guarding.

Suddenly a large crowd of hungry sticklebacks assembled about it and began an attack, evidently with the purpose of devouring the young with in. This conclusion was natural, as one dropped his prisoner among them, and as soon as the scattered household could collect his wriggling wif, he rushed at the invaders, attacked them fiercely, and soon was again in possession of his nest, which he at once set about mending with bits of weed and twigs.

A Chinese fish constructs a nest, not of grass or seaweed, but of frothy secretions. The male prepares bubbles in the air by sucking them in and strengthening them with mucus. He then forms the water, then he brings them into the water, and expels them construct a nest. The female enters this cavity, and lays her eggs there.

The eggs sink to the bottom of the water, and the male is then obliged to raise them to the nest. He appears to be unable to carry them in his mouth, so he swallows a large supply of air, and descends beneath the eggs, and violently expels the air accumulated. This air, finely divided by the fringes of the fins, escapes in the form of two jets of gaseous powder, which envelop the eggs and raise them to the surface.
